

The cyber attack on Sony that forced a major film release to be pulled is being viewed as a national security matter, the White House says.

read full article